Dr. Rosemary Carroll Farley
Distinguished Lasallian-Educator

During your time at Manhattan, you have distinguished yourself by the excellence of your teaching and by the caring concern you have shown to all of your students. You have served as an academic advisor, a mentor and a role model, giving freely of your time and talents in helping students, both the gifted and the not so gifted. As an academic advisor and mentor, you have been particularly active in encouraging our best students to engage in undergraduate research, the fruits of which have been outstanding success for several of them in graduate school. Your unselfish dedication to your students and the relationships you have established with them are principle reasons for the esprit de corps that has long characterized your department.
